

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE: August 25, 2010
Atomic Robo: Last Stop Animated Teaser

Lancaster, PA - Animation studio, The Factory, run by director Joseph W. Krzemienski, today released a Teaser for their upcoming short Atomic Robo: Last Stop. Based on Brian Clevinger and Scott Wegener's smash hit indie comic series: Atomic Robo.

About The Atomic Robo: Last Stop Teaser

This teaser is the first opportunity for fans to catch a glimpse of animation directly from the short film. Director and crew have been keeping a frequently updated production blog over at thefactory.com. Atomic Robo: Last Stop will be a 15 minute animated short scheduled for public release in early 2011.

About The Factory

The Factory has become a home for many local artists and regularly pulls talent from nearby art institutions, most prominently Pennsylvania College of Art & Design. In the span of two years, The Factory has grown from a one man operation in a spare bedroom, to a fully equipped operation working out of sister studio, Postage Inc. Atomic Robo: Last Stop is the second comic property The Factory has adapted into an animated short film. In 2009 they released the award winning, American Terror: Company Man, based on Jeff McComsey's Graphic Novel series. In addition to animation, The Factory also manages the The Factory Comics, a new website entirely featuring selective independent content.

About Atomic Robo

Atomic Robo, a print comic from Brian Clevinger and Scott Wegener, chronicles the Action Science adventures of a robot that's a little Ghostbusters and a little Indiana Jones crossed with a lot of Nikola Tesla. The series has recently shipped its fourth volume, and shows no signs of slowing down.

For More Information Contact:

Joseph W. Krzemienski (joseph@thefactory.com)
45 North Market Street | Lancaster PA 17603
thefactory.com | postagevfx.com